About Me

I am studying full-stack web development at Coder Academy, where I am currently learning the MERN stack. In the two years prior, I studied fashion design and then graphic design. During my graphic design course, I found a new love for coding through HTML and CSS and I just couldn't get enough, so I took a leap and went for it and have only fallen more in love since!

I love to solve problems, and previously, that just meant solving visual design problems, however, development now challenges me in a different and exciting way and the sheer satisfaction of both areas is motivating and rewarding to me.
